Good Effect of Gen. Bussey's Visit to the Pine Ridge Agency. SHOES-AN INJUSTICE DONE TO LIEUT. KINZIE

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., July 7, 1891.

Staff Correspondence of The Evening Star.

Surprised and delighted are two terms that may just now be truthfully applied to the Indians of Pine Ridge. The lot of these beings has not been a particularly happy one for some years past, but they seem to feel as though the future holds for them a good deal of brightness and promise. A little more than a week in the tribe were apposed to the mignation of their respondence of the Evening Star.

It Mullins, Wm. J. Ford, S. C. McNeal, Geo. L. French, E. F. Davis, E. E., Samuel B. Ward, M. D., Charles F. Macdonald, M. D., A. P. Southwick, M. D. S., and C. M. Daniels, M. D. Fathers Creeden and Lynch were present at the execution of Slocum and Wood and Chaplain there are consequently be recruited.

Men about the mignation of the strongest kind and have brought the mignation of the strongest kind. Men about the mignation of the strongest kind. Men about the mignation of the strongest kind. Men about the migna general was, they declared, the first offiorldly affairs. Several of the chiefs and head men, as soon as they knew Gen. Bussey had arrived, expressed a desire to meet him in counoil, so that they might fill him up with what plants. Their request was acceded to and then came the council and a consequent string of grievances that had in many instances good solid foundation. First among the matters they brought up was that of clothing. The question of clothes is, in the minds of the Ogalallas, the serious disturbing cause today, and if trouble should arise here it will be because the Ogalallas believe they have been far subjected. Common sense would teach us if we subjected. Common sense would teach us if we of grievances that had in many instances good solid foundation. First among the matters cause the Ogalallas believe they have been far thing. One Indian threw at the general's dle of things which had been issued to him at the last distribution of annuity goods, and as he let them fall he said: "Look at these clothes which the Great Father gives us to civilize us." Another Indian said: "If the like those you would want to get out of his way; you would not associate with him." Still another one, pointing contemptuously at that is the best you can do, and if each suit of clothes costs you 50 cents, why don't you give s the half dollar and keep the clothes." Lig load explained the absence of a great many of esthetic features, and the Indian has but little use for garments that are wholly without decorative quality. What they needed was woolen clothing, and although that might seem to some an unreasonable request, it should not be forgotten that in a treaty made between the United States and the Sioux in 1876 es-pecial provision was made for woolen gar-

In the matter of shoes a decided reform was asked for. The rectangular shoes supplied the Indian are almost valueless; they never were worth much anyhow. An Indian's foot is straight on the inside and curved on the outwear shoes. Of course this foot-gear cost a little more if the nails were articles for the past eleven years, and through-out all this period the color and the pattern have never varied. "If this shirtmaker would only die," remarked one Indian, "we might then get shirts of another color." So the en-tire Sioux nation has for some time been engaged in fervent prayer, every petition having for its burden the necessity for the speedy

As to blankets the complaints were less vig-erous than at any time for years. Closer texture and increased wool weight were asked for, but most of the emphasis was on the subect of color. In Sioux clothing black is an un-known hue, yet for years only black, or blue-black, blankets have been issued to them. After blankets themselves as evidence) the black turns to a rusty red and the result is a most and no one here could frame any reasonable argument in opposition to their desires. Perhaps the governmental idea is that the Indian, disgusted by the monotony of black blankets, perience shows that he does nothing of the kind. He raises a little money, adds a dollar or so to it by disposing of his canvas garments satisfactory in every way. Previous to last February the beef herd was largely composed of big-jawed cattle, bulls, yearlings and un-merchantable steers; but since the military assumed command—since Capt. Penney became agent—the cattle had all been of the best quality.

Gen. Bussey witnessed issues of beef and 1; Madrid, 2; Fidelio, 3. Time, 1.03%. Third after some further discussion of violations of other ration supplies, watched everything that was going on, made the acquaintance of the largest possible number of people in the shortest possible period of time and secured a good deal of information that ought to be valuable to the lindians. The general did not care to discuss his discoveries with me, but it was not difficult to sale of measurement and policy of the department and policy and the server of the second reactions with me, but it was not difficult to define from a stray remark or two that he some revolutorary but theroughly mosest recommendations. He inspected the supplies in the ware houses and I fool sure he was thoroughly satisfed with the coffee, flour, beans all sugar—all are excellent—but I would all sugar—all are excellent—but I would income than sharp about seed wheat, showed, hay forks, sewing thread and in ware. If the general accomplishes nothing more he has at least given momentary pleasure to the Oggo live to the original strains of the second race, one mine—Rangman, 1; Had some such investigation been made by such a high official last the mortality in this region would hardly have been as great as it was.

War Department has promulgated. Whenever there was a council or any gathering together of Indians there you could find the lieutenant secret of his business success as follows: "I has brought to the agency a great many of th appy when I am advertising, for chiefs and headmen and in each instance the then I know that, waking or sleeping. I have a exacting taskmaster could ask. Three months strong though silent orator working for me; one who never tires, never makes mistakes, and which stood business end up. Disabled as he ever given any evidence of slackness in his hopeless task nor has there been apparent any symptom of disgust, although most men would have dropped the job long ago. The department might just as well acknowledge now as at ment might just as well acknowledge now as at the signatures of the witnesses to the execument might just as well acknowledge now as at any other time that it was mistaken when it thought it could make infantrymen out of Ogalallas; that would be a much more manly course than that of attempting to place the blame on the shoulders of an officer who has displayed such zeal and tact as has Lieut. Kinzie. It would have been possible to secure perhaps a score or so of recruits had the recruiting officers hands been free. Men of some little prominence in the tribe would have enlittle prominence in the signatures of the witnesses to the execution. The names in full of all the witnesses to the execution. conduct is sometimes embarrassing to civilized mankind. An infantry officer whom I know may live to be a bald-headed man, but he will arrest in New York, charged with passing bogus never lose so much of his self-possession at checks. His name is Eugene G. L. Koch. He any one time as he allowed to escape him one morning last week. We were in camp on Wounded Knee creek, not far from the battle wounded Knee creek, not far from the backle poorly clad that they were ashamed to meet poorly clad that they were ashamed to meet ground. It was morn, rosy morn, and an indian trumpeter had just blown reveille out of the big end of a regulation bugle. Three of us had occupied the tent during the night, and two of us—Lieut. Williamson of the sixth cavalry and myself—were up. I had crawled about half-way into the garment which a D-street dealer would call "pants," when the tent-door flaps were thrust aside and an Indian entered. That was all right. Then followed his squaw and a little girl. That was all wrong. For at least five minutes previous to the un-timely entrance of our visitors the cook had been engaged in respectfully announcing breakfast, but the nameless officer had insubordinately refused to get up. Suddenly his appe-tite struck him and he was about to rise when straight on the inside and curved on the outside, yet the shoes supplied this and every other agency in the country look as though they had been lasted on bricks of irregular, angular and decidedly unyielding shape.
